Mary Petralia had been dealing with knee pain for many years. The pain would run up the side of her leg causing a lot of distress. She was forced to walk with a walker at all times and suffered from just trying to get around. She was completely against a knee replacement. She didn't want to go to that extreme, so she turned to Dr. Danko for help.

Fortunately, Dr. Danko recommended the peripheral nerve stimulator and that has alleviated a lot of her pain. "I've already recommended this procedure to other people who are struggling with pain," Mary said. She said the procedure is a "piece of cake" and the recovery is the "smoothest thing I've ever been through."
